World Most Beautiful Subway Stops in Kaohsiung City

Named after the nearby Central Park, this station lies on the Red Line of the Kaohsiung subway. A two-level underground station, the Central Park stop was designed by British architect Richard Rogers.

Formosa Boulevard is one of the busiest stations in Kaohsiung city, and also one of the most beautiful. In addition to being the place where the Red and Orange subway lines meet, the stop is also the location of the "Dome of Light." The "Dome of Light," situated on the upper part of the station, is known as the biggest public art installation all over the globe.
